HONORARY TEAM CAPTAIN AND PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL & SCOUTING MANAGER
WERDER BREMEN

“When I joined Werder in 2006, right from the start I felt the strong connection between the local community and SV Werder. Whenever Werder plays a match, you will see flags hanging out of windows all over the city, almost every car has a Werder sticker; the whole city is simply green and white. And Bremen is also a very pleasant place to live. The city has a lot of history, with its many little corners, the Town Hall, the Roland statue and Schnoor district. Not forgetting the Bürgerpark city park and the Freimarkt funfair in October. I still find these many facets of the city fascinating today. I also used to enjoy calling in at the many cafés in the Viertel district or on the Schlachte promenade, and I still like to stop off for an espresso before heading into the wohninvest Weser Stadium.”

As well as being very compact and walkable, Bremen also has more cycle paths than most other cities in Germany. Its many green spaces and almost complete absence of hills make it ideal for cycle tours. Bikes account for 25 percent of all traffic in Bremen. Among German cities with a population of over half a million it was ranked the most cycle friendly in a 2018 survey by the German Cyclists’ Federation.

The free BIKE IT! tours are signposted from start to finish and they are also included on the Bike Citizens app as well as being shown on maps and flyers.
